this is the sad fact, that except to faith. that treats "things that are not as though they are" failure le written thus far upon mission work bere as far as "the masses" are concerned.

Well! that is the case in England and America also, ls lt not? Only there the civilization, common to saved and unsaved hides it helter than here. I am not a 'pessimist;" but I know we shall never see brighter days till Jesus comes again. That is the "blessed hope" and the only hope of probable delay of the regular rains or a dying world. Of late I have seen very clearly, what I have long suspected, that the true rendering of ii Peter ill:12 (still obscured I am sorry to see, in the revised version as it was in the old) contains a very startling principle, in connection with our LORD'S coming "the 21 time without ein wonders in the way of irrigation, to meet coming of the day of God," &c. And this I sincerely believe to be the meaning-that our faithful watching for IIlm can hasten His coining. "Known unto God are all Hlaworks I well know, and known to the Father (yet to Nim only-Mark xiii.32) is the day of Hls Son's coming." But that no more contravenes the other principle ii.23 can be depled-"Him being delivered by the determinate counsel and fore-knowledge of God, ve have taken and hy wicked hands have crucified and slala." That la their wickedness was their own, ro! (lod appointed nor permitted. They were not constrained to kill Jesus by God's decree, but did it wholly of their own accord, uninfluenced by any person, but the devil and themselves.

And so God's certain fore-knowledge of the "day and hour" leaves you and me, dear reader, perfectly free to retard or hasten the dear LORD'S coming. O' how ioue pilgrimage in the world. I vleited it solemn yet delightful the thought! Shall I have the joy of aiding in bringing blessing to the world, by steadfastly waiting for and so bastening the coming of the day of river in itself, but from the eternal glaciers God? Bleesed day! So different from man'e! And though it may be ushered in by the dying throes of the evil one, until the very "heavens shall roll together as a ecroll," yet over the dark thunder cloud the how of promise appears; and unbounded blessings follow, till our ruined race is fully redeemed. The "few chosen" are identical with those who hasten His coming, I think. What a vista of blessing this opens np! AND THE MANY DANGERS THAT LURK THEREIN.

A Leading Agency for the Spread of Disense-The Home of the Cholera-Holled Water as a Plague

Presentive.

[Chicago Tribane] Among all the preventive: which have been suggested, the history of the disease shows that cleanliness is the most effective. as it is the changest, but for dirty people the hardest to apply. While cleanliness should be practiced in every way, both personal and in connection with alwelling-houses and their neighborhoods, cleanliness in water is unquestionably the most effective form of applying the remedy, because the cholera microbes breed most rapidly in impure water during hot weather, and are more easily conveyed by it from point to point than by the air or by clothing.

Professor Baird of the Smithsonian institntlon has called attention to this agency for the spread of disease in a manner which deserves attention. He says in a letter to The Washington Star that during the Centenulal he was stationed near the building for six mouths, and, although cases of diarrhea were prevalent all about him, he found that the use of boiled water was an absolute preventive, and that while they had several cases of Illness of this class before they began to use it thay had nous afterwards. He says:

The fishy tasts of the Potomac water at sponges, can also be in a great measure removed by the same process. I have usually enough water boiled in the moraing to last through the day. This is placed in a large water-cooler without ice, and drawn from when required to fill ice-putchers, etc. The water should boil actively for half an hour in order to kill the germs of disease. Of course this is only effective in cases of organic impurities, as mineral polsoas would not be destroyed thereby.

In the history of cholera, as of almost all sponges, can also be in a great measure re-

In the history of cholera, as of almost all other contagious and epidemic diseases, it is found that they are constantly present in low, awampy districts where the water is stagnant and gives out offensive exhalations. The home of cholera in Iudia and other Asiatle countries is located in districts of this kind. Wherever swamps and stagnant pools abound there is disease in various forms. The same rule holds true in every country where the water is impure or has been fouled in any manner.

Plymouth, Pa., which has suffered so terribly this year from typhoid fever, is in a urountainous and naturally healthy country, and its ordinary sanitary conditions were no worse than those of neighboring towns where there has been no disease at all. The cause of the epidemic there was a specific one and was easily traced to impure water. A little mountain stream because poisoned by the dejecta of one or two typhold fever patient, and, as it flowel into the reservoir which supplies the town, spread the germs of disease broadcast.

In New York city recently the filthy swamp of the "Collect Pond," underlying the Tombs prison, was partially uncovered during some repairs, resulting in the death of one of the prison officials and in the annoyance of the whole neighborhood. By purifying such spots as these and by boiling the water which is used for drinking purposes one of t'e principal causes of disease of personal cleanliness, clean house prem the destruction of kitchen refuse by burning, and the use of clean wholesome, fresh fool, there is no reason way any one need fear the cholera, even if it should reach

NEW JERSEY'S BURIED FORESTS.

Novel Industry of the Dennisvillians-Ditching for Saw-Lags.

[Cor. Philadelphia Thues.] Four miles beyond Woodbine, out on the sauly stretch of old sea hottom or beach that is named the Cape May peninsula, we came upon Dennisville, where all the Dennises of all time had evidently settled.

"We're all in the loggin' business," said a tall, thin Dannis, yet as far as the eye could the present time, due to the solution in it of reach not a tree could be seen standing that decomposed vegetation, or of fresh-water would even make the ghost of a fair log. would even make the ghost of a fair log. They ain't a growin'," continued the man. They are underground. We dig for them or spear them, as you might say. Here's the tool," aui, stepping into a low hut, be brought out a crowbar that, like everything else, seemed attenuated and was stretched out into a long, slender-pointed rod. "We wade along," continued the man, "and probe with this feeler, and when we strike a log we feel around, and if it is a good one we dig her up, and if it ain't we let her soak; that's about the way of it."

"So in Jersey you burrow for your logs?"
"That's about it," replied the man. "You know, we're obliged to be a whit old or so;

we've got the name of it, onayhow." "The secret of this business," said a well known geologist, "Is that ages ago all this area was covered with a line growth of large trees, and the same are foun I growing In some parts of the swamp yet, but they have died out and fallen down and sunk iato the soft mul, and so been covered up by moli and mud, until many other layers bave grown over them; but In some remarkable way the wood is preservel, and these sunken ancient logs are just as good for shingles and other articles as they were when alive; hence for many years there has been a steady bunt for them, and Dennisville is a result of the industry. To the botanist the tree is the evergreen white express and the numbers that once grew over this swamp and that have been entombed are beyon'l conception. The trees upon or near the surface are the only ones available and fortunately are the best, but far lelow there are probably myriads of others turned to stone and representing the just geological ages of the earth. The logs are worked out by the men who are nick-named 'Swampodles,' and who live in the malarious ditrict all their lives."

"When a log is found, a ditch is made A great saw is then applied and the roots removed, and as a rule, the log will rise to the surface and can to cut up and carriel off, though in many localities the shlagleare made right on the spot and dragged over the swamps on roals, in many cases, male of toughs and twigs. One of the swamps in Delaware extends over twenty live square miles, and hardly a house in Sussex county but what is shingled from the ancient deposit."

WALRUS HUNTING.

LIEUT. SCHWATKA'S ACCOUNT OF THE EXCITING SPORT.

The Weirus and this Haunts in Northern Waters-- How the Eaquimanx Harpoon and Shoot Their Gamo-Ment and Hintder.

[New York World.] Early August, 1878, naw us lawling in North Hudsen's lay, the ice having disappeared from the water on both the lakes and the sea. About ten miles to the eastward of our camp was a small is lated island, an insignificant looking affair, cov ering half an aere, or less, but quite prominent from being the only islant in such a conspicuous place. Here the walrus congregated in large numbers when there were no cakes of ice on which they could crawl, and here the Esquimanx repaired to hunt them. A walrus-hunting party of Junuits, as the Esquimaux call themselves, may be anything from two or three to that of many dozen, although six to ten is a fair sample. They take their large sealskin scows, or comiens, holding a score of these people, should the party be large, or a white man's whateboat If handy, and with three or four small skin canoes-kiaks-weighling about forty or fifty pounds apiece they repair to the northern half of the island, their weapons being guns, lances, harpoons, lines and floats, They always try to select a tine, clear day, with but little sea at the thue; in fact, if very rough they never attempt one of those hunts and their greatest fear is that a sterm may arise while they are engaged in It, for to reach the Island, make a successful catch, cut it up and return requires the greater part of a day, and the summer day of north Hudson's bay is a generous allo-pathic one of many hours, followed by a very homopathic night. Unless very quiet they never essay the passage in their comiens, but will risk much more in the whaleboats, a number of which they possess and manage as well as the white men. The hunting party nearing the island, all conversation is stopped or dropped to neceswere muttled and all movements are done s. silently as possible, for the walrus has an scute ear although it is very small. Havng complete' the landing noiselessly their weapons are made roady.

The first weapon used on the animal is the harpoon. It is similar to the harpoon of the whalers, which has been probably borrowed from it and adapted to civilized uses it is about six feet long, with a barbed spaar point or head which, driven beneath the tough skin of the walrus, the barh turns and in doing so becomes detached from the handle, which is thrown or floats away, as It may happen to be on land or in the water where it is struck. Attached to this barbor head is a strong, supple line of ta nucl sealskin about twenty or thirty feet long, about the slzs of rope called "clothes" line" and three or four times as strong. This is wound around the native's neck when he has the walrus spear in his hand. At the other and is a large inflated seni-kln float about the size of a ten-gallon keg, or probably a 'ittle larger. This is sometimes allowed to hang over the hunter's back-for it welghs little or nothing -or a companion, generally a boy, may hold it for him walking tehind him as Lo etenis on the animal with careful

Every projecting stone or hillock of sand is taken advantage of in gotting as near as are us close as they can crawl without showing themselves or attracting attention, a signal is given by the, a loud short of "i-yl-yl!" and with three or four nimble bounds forward the hunters are each within bounds forward the hunters are each within striking distance of the selected walrus and burying the spear head in the animal'sthick hide, they commence paying out the line from around their head with lightning-like rapidity as the huge bruto descends the steep slore, and when its end is reached they throw the light float bigh in the air with a merry "Ab-nyah!" equivalent to our slang "Go iti" and possibly it may not atrice the ground at all, so swift is the walrus escaping, or if It does it is with a bound that sends it clear into the sea just as the object at the other end of the line goes into it too with a splash that can only be made by a t u of tough meat striking an incoming

As soon as the hard has gained the water the hunters rush for their kiaks and boats in which to pursuo the walrus, especially those that are swimming away with the floats, their arms being the guns and lances. When a speared walrus gains the water he at once dives, carrying the float down with him out of sight, but after two or three minutes the float bobs up about 10) yards away and a second or two alter is followed by the minmal coming to the surface to breathe, which he does with loud putts and sucrts, "blowing" water buto the nir like a small whale. If again frightened by the near approach of his elemies he takes two or three gasps of breath and goes down again, to reuppear a trille sooner than before, for it is a herculean work to keep the lloat down with him under water. If seversly pressel, that is, heel at every time Lis head appears, or thrust at with a lance, he gets but little breathing time above, and after the that has been down a dozen or a score of t mes, each interval less, the nearly exhausted walrus ceases to drag it under with him, and when he dives to e-caps his tormentors, he simply draws it along the surface like a smull lish with a large cork. As son as the hunters have game! their canoes and hoats away they scarry after the speared walrus and the second one bobs his head above water a shot from a gun, or a lance thrust if he be near, greets his appear-fully dragged to the shore and a few places cut la his hide so as to secure more lines, ends he is placed above the water, or far enough at least to allow them to begin cutting him up. This is done into teu or twelve divisions of about 151 pounds each, one side of each buge cube being the skin. These pieces are folded over so that the edges of the akin come together, when they are sewed with a lashing, and each bundle, therefore, has only the skin outside, and in this condition can defy the teeth of any-thing in the world, so tough is the hide. The head, one fore-flipper and one hind one falls to the man who struck the walrus, and the rest is divided among the hunters, to be again divided and divided with each new party they may encounter until it is eaten up. These bundles of meat are taken to the up. These bundles of meat are taken to the nearest Island—for Walrus island is submerged at the highest tides—and each bundle covered with huge stones to prevent the depredations of polar bears, wolves and other arctic carnivora.
